Black Hole Drop: The “Mother of all Caves”... Actun Loch Tunich! Not for the faint of heart. Start with a vigorous hike up into the foothills of the Maya Mountains to the mouth of the cave. There is a sink hole on the edge that sits over 300 feet above the basin below, 200 feet above the rain forest canopy that grows out from the sink hole basin. Our fully trained caving guides rig a system of rappelling ropes for your descent to the basin below. The first 10 feet provides the adrenaline, the next 200 feet provides an unforgettable experience, the last 100 feet takes you down through the rain forest canopy. Once you’re at the bottom you rest with a delicious picnic lunch. How do we get you out? Climb of course! After a return hike including some rock climbing, ladder climbing, and a lot of sweating, it’s just a short ride back to the lodge for a dip in the natural saltwater pool with a well deserved cold drink. Well treaded sneakers and hiking boots and mosquito repellent.

You will then get into gear and venture on a guided hike to Bocawina Falls where you will have the opportunity to rappel one hundred feet down the falls! After reaching the falls, you’ll strap up and just lean back. With the sound of gushing water and beautiful scenery, your guide will teach you how to rappel. After your brief intro, you’ll enjoy 100 ft water rappel battle. Hold on tight, the water will be coming at you. After a tiring but AMAZING descent, enjoy the natural pool at the foot of the waterfall. This a two hour plus jungle affair. This tour is offered without waterfall rappelling for $200/person.
